KASE launches beta version of new website cobranded with TradingView Inc.

Kazakhstan Stock Exchange JSC (KASE or the Exchange) launches a beta version of a new official website of the Exchange at beta.kase.kz as of a December 12, 2016.

The Exchange's corporate website aims to strengthen customer focus of KASE and its services, acting as a primary source of information about the stock market of Kazakhstan, Exchange activities, its members, listed companies and financial instruments.

The new website of the Exchange will be much more dynamic and user friendly, having a new interesting design and friendly interface, while being highly informative with a large daily data feed, mostly generated in real time. It will have sections for different groups of the Exchange service users from the beginners to professional market participants.

The new beta version of the website at the very launch in addition to the main page offers other pages covering equity markets, corporate bonds, government securities, securities of international financial organizations and derivatives. A list of pages will be continuously expanding as the new sections are launched, which will be announced accordingly.

The new website's special feature is the use of TradingView, the world's popular financial stock chart service (library) (<https://ru.tradingview.com/>), in accordance with the cobranding agreement signed between KASE and TradingView Inc.

"TradingView is a very convenient service for investors and traders, which can be equally used by both inexperienced users just monitoring the market and professionals working with the technical analysis tools and interactive life charts. Now all the features of this modern platform will be made available to KASE information users, with more and more new features to be presented every month, as we connect new blocks of our data to the service," the Deputy Chairman of the Management Board of KASE A. Tsalyuk said.

TradingView service has an extensive set of tools for viewing and analyzing the current situation, keeping an eye on the price movements of KASE-traded financial instruments, with an opportunity to do forecasts and monitor market conditions.

All the new website-related activities are planned to be completed by the end of 2017. The current website www.kase.kz will continue to operate as usual.
